Protect yourself and your cargo

Cargo theft is one of the top threats to the supply chain. It hits road transport – and drivers – especially hard as cargo is most vulnerable while in transit.

The problem is not limited to high-value loads. Less protected lower-value loads are also tempting targets.

Security incidents can have devastating consequences for carriers, even those who are properly insured.

Insurance policies often exclude some incidents or do not cover the entire loss. Reporting theft can also result in administrative burden and higher premiums.

Word spreads quickly, and a theft incident may cause irreparable loss of reputation.

The IRU Academy and the Transported Asset Protection Association (TAPA) – the leading global supply chain security association – have developed a state-of-the-art course on transport security.

This e-learning course allows drivers to minimise security risk throughout transport operations.

The course focuses on cargo theft but also covers related security risks such as illegal immigration and smuggling.

Why e-learning?

Security is not just about technology: it is first and foremost about people. Secure transport of goods requires knowledgeable drivers, however every minute a driver is sitting in a classroom he is not on the road. So how to streamline your training process?

With e-learning.

This course not only provides consistent, reliable, generally applicable best practice from TAPA's security experts, it also does so in under one hour, and can be taken on any device, anywhere, at any pace, and in a traceable way.

In addition, it is the ideal vector for periodical "refresher" training to reinforce key security principles.
What you will learn

The course covers all aspects of a driver's job including:

- Awareness of security threats and their consequences
- How to plan routes to reduce risk exposure
- How and when to conduct vehicle inspections
- How to spot illegal immigrants, mistakes in cargo documents, and signs of vehicle tampering
- The value of confidentiality and appropriate use of social media
- How to react if an incident occurs

Course format

The course takes less than an hour to complete and can be accessed on any device (smartphone, tablet or computer).

The course uses simple, everyday language and includes numerous videos as well as interactive exercises.
